

WEEKLY INVESTMENT STRATEGY REPORT ON 1st JULY, 2024

CAUTIOUS SENTIMENT COVERED THE MARKET AS THE SECOND QUARTER BUSINESS ANNOUNCEMENT SEASON APPROACH

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY OF THE WEEKLY INVESTMENT STRATEGY REPORT ON 1ST JULY, 2024

The second revision of U.S. economic growth data released on June 27 showed that the GDP for Q1 increased by 1.4%, higher than the initial 1.3% estimate but still lower than the 3.4% recorded in the previous quarter. This figure aligns with analysts' expectations, indicating that the U.S. economy shows signs of weakening and has not recovered as positively as hoped. Further inflation data will be needed to predict the Fed's likelihood of cutting interest rates in the upcoming September meeting.

During the past week, the VN-Index decreased by 2.86%, making it the sharpest drop among the indices monitored. However, a positive signal was noted as the average daily trading volume and value slightly decreased compared to the previous week, reaching 880 million shares and 22,040 billion VND, respectively. In terms of sectors, the most significant outflows were observed in financial services (-4.72%) and construction and materials (-2.7%).

With the market experiencing the sharpest weekly decline in the past two months, domestic investor sentiment is expected to remain cautious. The VN-Index is projected to fluctuate between 1,230 and 1,255 points during the week of July 1–5, 2024. Investors are advised to reduce a stock-to-cash ratio of 50%.

Investors should carefully select stocks to participate in and only hold stocks that have good accumulation bases and unique growth stories. Additionally, investors should restructure their portfolios for stocks that are currently at high price levels and facing strong selling pressure.

If the index continues to face intense selling pressure, it is likely to adjust to the range of 1,180 – 1,200 points.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE MARKET OVERVIEW IN THE PREVIOUS WEEK

- The DXY index saw a slight increase early in the week before cooling off at the end, following news that the U.S. core PCE index for May rose 2.6% month-over-month, matching market forecasts and marking the lowest level in three years. This reinforced the likelihood of the Fed cutting interest rates in September. Overall, the DXY index increased by 0.09% compared to the previous week, closing at 105.9 points.
- In Vietnam, the USD/VND exchange rate remained almost unchanged compared to the previous week, at 25,455 VND. As of June 28, 2024, the USD exchange rate at commercial banks is trading in the range of 25,230 – 25,473 VND. On the free market, the rate decreased slightly by 10 VND, with buying at 25,940 VND and selling at 26,020 VND.

VIETNAMESE STOCK MARKET OVERVIEW IN THE PAST WEEK

After experiencing a week of fluctuating trading, the VN-Index closed the last session of the week with a decrease of 13.77 points (~1.07%), ending at 1,245.32 points. The current market continues its downward trend as it has been unsuccessful in surpassing resistance around the 1,300-point mark. Market liquidity has declined over the past 10 trading sessions, and capital flows have not shown signs of returning to the market.

MACRO-ECONOMIC OVERVIEW IN THE PAST WEEK

INFORMATION	EFFECT	ASSESSMENT
The economic growth data of the US, revised for the second time and announced on June 27th, shows that the GDP for the first quarter of the US increased by 1.4%, higher than the 1.3% increase announced in the first revision but still lower than the 3.4% recorded in the previous quarter.	Neutral	This figure is not beyond analysts' forecasts, indicating that the US economy shows signs of weakening and has not yet recovered as positively as expected. We will need more data on inflation to predict the possibility of a rate cut by the Fed at the upcoming September meeting.
The Chinese government has decided to establish a relief fund for financial institutions facing difficulties. The draft law detailing the collection and allocation of contributions to the fund will be reviewed by the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress on Tuesday (June 25), and it is expected to be approved by the end of this year.	Positive	This move aims to prevent the risk of a financial crisis that could be triggered by the collapse of major real estate companies amidst a declining and troubled real estate market.
In May 2024, credit in Ho Chi Minh City continued to increase by 1.15%, reaching a total outstanding loan amount of 992.8 trillion VND, accounting for 28% of the total outstanding credit in the area and up 2.78% compared to the end of the year. This is higher than the overall credit growth in the area.	Positive	This is a positive figure, indicating optimistic signals for the real estate market to recover and grow again in the near future.
As of June 12, 2024, the disbursement of public investment capital for transportation projects was 4,833.9 billion VND, reaching 17.2% of the assigned plan. This includes 3,278 billion VND from the central budget, achieving 16.5% of the plan, and 1,556 billion VND from the local budget, achieving 19.1% of the assigned plan.	Positive	It is highly likely that in the second half of the year, the disbursement of public investment capital for transportation projects will be accelerated, benefiting companies in the public investment sector.
